Any recommendations to the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Superintendent of Public Instruction on necessary organizational changes needed within the Departments of Health and Human Services and Public Instruction to be more responsive to and supportive of the birth to grade three continuums of early learning and development in an effort to optimize learning gains realized in the prekindergarten years.

B-3 INTERAGENCY COUNCIL PROGRESS-TO-DATE

B-3 Interagency Council members were appointed in November 2017, and the Department of Public Instruction filled the newly established Associate Superintendent of Early Education position in December 2017. The first meeting of the B-3 Council was convened on January 31, 2018. Prior to the meeting co-chairs Associate Superintendent for Early Education at the Department of Public Instruction and Deputy Secretary for Human Services at the Department of Health and Human Services thoroughly reviewed the B-3rd Grade Interagency Council Legislation and planned the agenda.

The initial meeting on January 31, 2018 included: introduction of council members, communication of the Council's charge, presentations (Appendices C, D, and E) on early brain development and research on what improves birth through 3rd grade children's educational success, and co-chairs presented on the strengths and challenges of the seven focus areas of the B-3rd grade education system from their respected departments. Council members engaged in a group discussion on work prioritization.

Overall discussion themes were:

- Children's development is most influenced by their families – we must consider this in our work.
- Education is just one factor in children's healthy development: children's physical, cognitive and social-emotional development are inter-related.
- The Birth-5 and K-3 systems are very different in terms of standards, expectations for children, funding, governance and structure.
- Children and families experience challenges in navigating within and between both systems
- It is important to consider the balance of public and private and the role of government as we prioritize our work.
- We should be willing to think outside of the box and not assume that current programs, standards and structures need to drive our future goals and recommendations.
- We need to connect to other Councils and state level efforts around B-8 so we don't duplicate efforts.
- The workforce is key to successful outcomes for children.

The second meeting of the B-3 Interagency Council was held on March 15, 2018. This meeting began with a review of the Council's charge and a summary of the seven focus areas:

- standards and assessment
- data driven improvement and outcomes, including shared accountability measures
- teacher and administrator preparation and effectiveness
- instruction and environment
- transitions and continuity
- family engagement
- governance and funding

Council members prioritized their top three focus areas which were: 1) data driven improvement and outcomes, 2) teacher and administrator preparation and effectiveness, and 3) transitions and continuity.

Overall discussion themes were:

- Families need a “navigator” to help them and their children make good transitions and access appropriate services.
- An ideal birth to age 8 system would be its own system outside of the current birth to age five and K-12 systems we have now.

Before the meeting adjourned Council members identified and requested information to be presented at the next meeting which would be helpful in developing vision, goals and strategies. The requested information included: funding streams for early education, roles of the groups that work in early education, existing early childhood data, and the current pre-k to Kindergarten transition work.

Future Meetings

The next meetings of the B-3 Interagency Council will be held in May and August. Topics will include an overview of the current early childhood system in North Carolina, an overview of the NC Pathways to Grade Level Reading data indicators, and discussions about the vision, goals and strategies for the Council.
